Youth—that perennial fact and recurrent challenge—is constantly demanding more sympathetic understanding and thoughtful consideration.. To aid in fostering a clearer perception of the question, THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR is printing 26 articles on "The Youth of Today," written by one well qualified for the task. This is the eighth article of the series.

By WALTER W. VAN KIRK There is something new under the sun. It is the Students-in-Industry Movement. A number of young people, not content with studying the problems of industry in the abstract, determined to come to grips with the by donning overalls and looking for

Special British Stamps to Mark Post Convention

FOR the second time only in its history the British Post Office is to issue commemoration postage stamps. Since 1840 it has been uniformly averse to the use of stamps for commemorative or similar purposes.

But with the coming Postal Union convention in London, five kinds of stamps are to be on sale for three months in place of those of ordinary design. Their values are to be 1d., 1½d., and £1.

While the materials lie ready to the hand of genius and at any moment may be awakened, Sir Archi-bald Strong believes that at the present moment there is a dearth both of good readers and good poets. It takes a communal interest in literature to produce great genius, he said, and he pointed to the concern of the people in the Elizabethan, Romantic and Victorian periods which produced the great writers of those times in contrast to the "debonair interest of the present more aloof and sophisticated age." Poetry and Stage Separate

He deplored the separation of poetry and the stage, declaring that as a result, not only are poetic works not being produced in the theater but that the poets themselves, lacking theatrical knowledge, are writing "dramatic but unactable plays." The general tendency toward realism and the insistence upon prose drama in his opinion "forbid all heights of the highest genius of a Shakespeare Marlowe or Webster."

Mr. Raymond urged the teaching of literature by the old methods of text book, standardized tests and memorization which in the past have fostered the appreciation of literature and at a second speech in the evening emphasized the value of good literature in the enrichment of human ex-

CAPITULATIONS ABOLITION AGAIN SOUGHT IN EGYPT

Question of Nile Waters Is Another Issue to Be Raised, Says Minister

BY WIRELESS FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON-Dr. Hafez Afifi Bey, interview he stated that he was anxious to discuss the abolition of the capitulatory régime in Egypt and the subject of the utilization of the greater supplies of Nile water which are to be made available through the construction of storage works in the Sudan and at a later stage possibly in Abyssinia.

The latter issue is mainly technical, but the question of capitulations involves a conference of interested powers, including Great Britain. Successive Egyptian governments have pointed to the fact that aboli-tion has already been secured by

Turkey and Persia. The issue necessitates considerable modifications of the Egyptian judicial system before the states concerned will consent to their citizens being made amenable to Egyptian law, but while Great Britain has already expressed sympathy with Egyptian aspirations and a willingness to attend a conference, certain other powers, notably Greece and Italy, are showing no enthusiasm for the change.

It is understood that Afifi Bey ever, is regarded by Downing Street as unpropitious to take any steps in the matter, this being partly owing to the imminence of the general elec-tion. At the same time it is admitted that Egypt has a case, since under existing circumstances foreigners can and do violate the laws of the country, notably in connection with the drug traffic, and yet remain immune to punishment.

The Foreign Minister's visit is expected to be comparatively short, but he is likely to return again in June after the election, when King Fuad is to tour certain European capitals. It is an open secret that Afifi Bey would like to vacate his post in order. to become minister to London, but neither the King nor the Liberal Constitutional Party wants him to resign at the present juncture.

TRADE ARBITRATION IS URGED FOR CUBA

Plan Would Settle Dispute in Sugar Industry

HAVANA, Cuba (P)—A remedy for dissension betwen Cuban cane planters and mill operators by the setting up of national provincial arbitration boards, has been recommended to the national defense committee by San-chez de Aballi, Secretary of Com-munications, and Arturo S. de Ber-rayarza, president of the Sugar Planters Association.

The plan would save the industry thousands of dollars by stamping out costly quarrels between planters and operators, its authors maintained.

A national arbitration board, composed of six leaders from each divi-sion of the industry, and a delegate chosen by President Gerardo Machado y Morales, which would serve as a court of appeals for similar boards in provincial capitals, is suggested.

AND SOMETHING EVERY MOTOR-CAR BUYER SHOULD UNDERSTAND.

The Cadillac-built La Salle is just as easy to purchase as many cars of far less value and far less prestige. And it is far more economical to operate.

THOUGH you know full well that Cadillac and the Cadillac-built La Salle are the finest and smartest cars on the streets of the world, here is a fact about La Salle which you may never have fully appreciated.

It is actually far easier to purchase a La Salle than the average motorist realizes, and far more economical to operate it than many imagine.

La Salle is priced as low as $2295, f. o. b. Detroit. This means that, for very moderate monthly payments, you can enjoy the satisfaction, prestige and pride of possession of a Cadillac-built car.

It means also, a car built to last a lifetime. Not that you intend to drive it a lifetime—but, whether you drive it a year, or five years, or ten years, La Salle must yield uninterruptedly brilliant performance because of its famous Cadillac-built 90-degree, V-type, 8-cylinder power plant.

For the Cadillac Motor Car Company, with all the resources of General Motors at its command, and with all the world to choose from, has long since proved to its own satisfaction and the satisfaction of hundreds of thousands of owners that the 90-degree, V-type principle is the soundest principle to produce the highest type of eight-cylinder results.

country by individual owners and large corporations prove conclusively that from a service and operating standpoint La Salle is the most economical car for you to own.

Where can you find any other car-excepting Cadillac-so adequately designed to meet 1929 traffic conditions? There are no others equipped with the three ultra-modern Cadillac-La Salle safety features: the Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission, Duplex-Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes, and Cadillac-La Salle Security-Plate Glass.

The most casual examination of La Salle interior decoration, appointment and upholstery reveals it to be so lavish as to create an atmosphere and environment unequaled elsewhere and in perfect keeping with the most luxurious home.

In braking, gear-shifting, steering and all the operations of driving, no other car in all the world-except Cadillac itself—can equal La Salle.

Call at any Cadillac-La Salle dealer showroom and determine for yourself just how easy it is to own a La Salle. The General Motors Deferred Payment Plan makes it possible for you to enjoy your La Salle at once and pay for the car out of income.

Cadillac-La Salle dealers will gladly accept your present car at its full market value. It is probable that this value will be sufficient to take care of the down payment and reduce the monthly payments.

He undertook the inquiry, he explained in announcing its results, with a desire "to contribute something toward the correction of what I believe to be erroneous public opinion concerning the college man and woman today." He will make a detailed report at the annual meeting here of the Association of Deans and Advisers of Men.

The "collegiate" of the stage and comic papers represents only 1 or 2 per cent of the student body, the replies agree, and almost all declare that slouchy appearance, tumble-down socks, three-day shirts and rumpled collars are exceptions and situation, and to make their careers are disapproved by the majority of collegians.

Most college men, they said, wer serious minded, particularly about their appearance, kept their hair neatly trimmed and their shoes shined, wore clean linen, and es-chewed the coonskin coat, the gaudily painted flivver, hard drinking and bad manners. Replies from coeducational colleges declare the presence of women students on the campus has a good effect on the personal appearance and conduct of the young meu.

The rare "collegiate," it was held, does not as a rule excel in scholastic standing, sports or other student activities. Some of the college authorities went so far as to declare respected among their fellows.

Titles in the doubles, singles and allevents will be decided today.

Members of the Hub team will divide first prize of $1000 and each will receive a medal for the score of 3063 which they set up on March 20. This is six pins better than the mark which won the title for the Oh Henry team of Chicago last year, but 136 pins below the tourney record. Klinger's Buicks of Watertown, Wis., got $975 for second place with 3041, and Albert Lea's Edelweiss of Chicago got third, $935 for 3030. This team, under the name of Bleck's Acmes last year, won the same place and the same money.

A tie for tenth place was caused Monday night by the Lauterbach Coal & Ice Company of Cicero, Ill. They had the leaders in uncomfortable suspense for a while, but subsided with 2998. They tied with the George Spring Guths of Chicago, and each receive $550. The J. M. Kralovecs & Son team of Cicero was second high on the last squad with 2974 for sixteenth place.

8 Son team of Cicero was second high on the last squad with 2974 for six teenth place.

Sixth place in the singles standing the form in defeating Edward King, veteran player of Pinehurst, 6—0, 6—3. At no time during the contest was Allison forced to extend himself. Van Ryn, on the other hand, won an easy victory over Morton Shapiro, member of the University of North Carolina tennis team. The score was 66—0, 6—1. Van Ryn later in the day defeated F. C. Baggs, veteran New York player, at 6—3, 6—4. Baggs attracted the attention of the gallery by meeting Van Ryn's volleys with well placed cut-strokes.

Gilbert Hall of Orange, N. J., took an easy 6—0, 6—1 victory from A. C. Walworth of New York, the New Jersey player's forecourt game completely bewildering his opponent.

Tamio Abe and Sadakazu Ohta, both of New York and members of the last season's Japanese Davis Cup team, turned in easy love set victories over their opponents, Henry Dunnell of Providence, R. I., and Richard Schoaf of Fort Wayne, Ind.,

DARTMOUTH WINNER OVER PRINCETON, 5—1

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

PRINCETON, N. J.—Dartmouth College defeated Princeton University here Monday in the opening game of the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League, by a score of 5 to 1. Despite the fact that Dartmouth was playing its first game of the season, the team showed up finely in the field and each of the Green players made at least one hit. G. E. Hollstrom '30, pitched the entire game for the winners and allowed only five hits, while the losers used three pitchers who were found for 11 hits. The score by innings:

IRISH LEAGUE WINS Special from Monitor Bureau

LONDON—The political division of Ireland into two sections has served, among other things, to increase the number of "representative" sporting fixtures, to which keen partisanship attaches. The Irish Free State has for some time had an association football league of its own, and recently a team, selected from players in the clubs competing in this competition, met the oldestablished Irish League at the Oval, Belfast. The Irish League proved victorious by the odd goal in three.

INDIANA'S NINE MAY SURPRISE

Showing Depends a Great Deal Upon How Well the Newcomers Perform

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Prospects for the 1929 season in baseball at Indiana University are uncertain since only 7 out of 15 lettermen from last year's team reported for the varsity. Coach E. S. Dean intends to use a promising crop of sophomore candi-dates to fill the vacancies.

The Hoosiers have returned from a training trip in the South where they played a five-game series with the University of Mississippi at Oxford, Miss. Due to the short period of practice held out of doors before venturing beyond the Mason and Dixon line, the Indiana nine was on the short end of a majority of the games played at Oxford. However, the Hoosiers won their opening "Big Ten" test, 4 to 2, from Ohio State University.

After a five game series with Wabash which ends April 12 Indiana faces a strenuous schedule consisting of 11 Western Conference games and four non-Conference games and four non-Conference contests. The Prince, who plays golf with all the enthusiasm that he throws into his many other athletic undertakings, drives a long ball, but, probably because he is not able in these days to devote a great deal of time to the game, he is inconsistent through the green. It is recalled that the last time he played for the West Norfolk Club's team, in a match with Brancaster Artisans, he was defeated at the last hole by Robert Lake, a veteran gardener. The Brancaster links are within easy reach of the Royal residence at Sandringham.

Coach Workman, who is in charge of baseball, has turned the team over temporarily to Coach Menze during spring football

Of the catchers, N. F. Kruse '29 and E. R. Adland '30, both lettermen, are the best candidates, with Kruse probably having the edge, Coach Workman says. D. S. Wilson '30, a new man, is showing up well, but as yet has not proved the extent of his

Like the cut of the boat, the course Like the cut of the boat, the course has been subject to change. After one race at Henley, the race was rowed, frequently under dreadful traffic conditions, from Westminster to Putney. Putney to Mortlake was then settled upon, and with the exception of the years when it was rowed the reverse way, from Mortlake to Putney, in 1846, 1856 and 1863, the race has always been over this 4% miles of testing tidal water. In 1866 river police controlled the traffic for the first time. It is doubtful whether any of the performances in the regular boat face excels the great feat of Oxford against Cambridge rivals at Henley regatta, in the Grand Challenge Cup race of 1843. That was when the Dark Blues, minus one man, rowed in a service and minus one man, rowed in a service and minus one man, rowed in a service of 1843. Inrigged, and not the least striking feature was a coat of arms emblazoned upon the heavy rudder. Outriggers were used for the first time in 1846, and it is noteworthy that one of the most dramatic episodes in the history of the race was due to this development, long after it ceased to be a novelty. In 1872 a nut won free from the great J. H. D. Goldie's rigger, as he was stroking Cambridge to victory in a snowstorm. As he could not put an ounce of his 173 pounds behind his work without inviting an irreparable "crab," he concentrated solely upon setting the time for his crew with all the infallibility of a metronome, and he had the satisfaction of winning by two lengtls.

Arnold was by no means the first to raise this unusual question concerning the one who was almost universally hailed as the prince of poets in his own century. One of the most acute of all critics, William Hazlitt, observed that "the problem has hardly yet been settled, and is hardly worth settling; for if he was not a great poet, he must have been a great prose-writer." Carlyle felt, "It is no use to decide the disputed question whether he were a poet or Some not, in the strict sense of the term; finest heads ever known full of deep sayings, uttered in the shape of That such are happier, shocks all couplets." In America, however, some the last century were stout in their defense of Pope's position. Prescott held that it was "absurd to inquire But mutual wants this happiness inif Pope be really a poet. It amounts Lowell made the shrewd distinction: "As truly as Shakespeare is the poet Condition, circumstance, is not the of man . . . so truly is Pope the poet of society."

No great figure perhaps has ever been as much of a storm center in this vexed issue. In a sense Hazlitt and Carlyle are right: we cannot setand carlyle are right.

Stage hands and theater workers who saw the preview wept, while at another test, when we heard the voices without seeing the picture, people were moved to tears by the intensity of the dialogue alone. To me this indicates that the voice, even more than the picture, grips an audience.

Duplicating a Selected Program

In the past, great actors have been able to reach only limited audiences. With a single print of a talking picture they can reach more people in one day than in a week of personal performances. Duplicate prints increase the figures to fabulous pro-portions. This means that their earning capacity is enlarged, and at the same time their working efforts are minimized. Also, the performance which reaches the public is unquestionably better than would be af-forded by personal performances. In 10 performances by any actor or cast there is certain to be one that stands out above the others, and in making a talking picture this one best performance is selected out of the many scenes shot. Thus the quality of the production given through talking pictures transcends that of the stage, and is, moreover, uniformly main-

International Aspects

The international aspects of talking pictures are an especially inthat these pictures would have to be remade for foreign bookings. Miss Pickford, for instance, has expected to make a silent version of her latest picture to be shown abroad. But the more we think of it the less we contemplate such a move. More than one European actor of prominence has used his own language when acting in the United States, and it is pos-sible that talking pictures in English may be shown throughout the world. with something in the nature of a synopsis of the plot, similar to the argument of an opera, given audiences which do not understand English. If this is done, it will be a wonderful boon to the English language, and aid greatly in bringing about world friendship.

The scope of talking pictures, however, is far from limited by the more usual type of screen play. Al-most everything which people now gather in halls to see and hear can to any other. There is that the play is not being acted quite lots of broad comedy to "Strong Boy" as legitimately as it was when first and a nice little romance steals in staged. Mrs. Fiske is delightful, of course, but the performance given aboard a bandited railroad train for by Stella Mayhew throws the play wind-up.

A New Efficiency

When the production of talking pictures becomes more nearly standardized, they will be made more cheaply than silent films are now, even though more technical skill and mechanical operations enter into the work. This is partially because there is a marked tendency within the industry to do away with great multiplicity of facilities and to centralize production on a sound, businessilke basis. The writer of film stories will be turned out much the left free to evolve talking pictures than the more systematically than has been the film, it will be turned out much more systematically than has been the second of the studio, but once the script is in the more systematically than has been the second of the second content of the simple of the studio, but once the script is in the more systematically than has been the simple of the second content of the simple of the studio, but once the script is in the more systematically than has been the simple of the second content of the simple of the studio, but once the script is in the more systematically than has been the second content of the simple of the second content is supplied to the studio, but once the script is in the more systematically than has been the script is in the more systematically than has been the second content is simple to the sum of the studio, but once the script is in the more systematically than has been the script is in the more systematically than has been the script of the studio, but once the script is in the more systematically than has been the script is in the sum of the script o is reported as strong and very satisfactory with the denim mills sold up for the first half of the year. The makers of chambrays have sizable orders on their books, Interest in ginghams is growing.

In print cloths the extreme dullness In print cloths the extreme dullness of the early part of the week was relieved with some sizable orders placed on Friday and a fairly good business for the balance of the week, While prices suffered early in the week, principally from second hands, the demand late in the week restored most prices to within ½c a yard of those prevailing at the close of the previous week.

those prevailing at the close of the previous week.

The 38½-inch 64x60s 5-35-yard sold lower early, but closed at 7½c. The 60x48s 6.25-yard sold at 6½c for large and 6½c for small lots. The 68x72s declined the most, having brought 8½c early, but later only 8%c for April and 8½c for May and June delivery. The 72x76s 4.25-yard moved at 9¾c, and the 80 squares at 10½c, although most mills held out for 10½c. The 27-inch 64x60s 7.60-yard was obtained at 5½c. Sheetings were dull. The 5.50-yard sold at 6¼c and the 31-inch 5.00-yard for 7c for spot and 6%c for future delivery. The 37-inch 48 squares 4.00-yard brought 8¼c and the 40-inch 4.25-yard 7%c.

GRAIN EXPORTS, LOWER ASHINGTON (P) — Grain exports the United States last week were 000 bushels, compared with 1,582,000 last the previous week.

DEVELOPING IN PACKER HIDES

There is a stronger tone in the packer hide market, though trading was quiet. Sales did not reach 50,000 hides. Chief transaction included 18,000 brand cows at 18%c, an advance of ½ cent over the top a week ago.

Frigorifico hides are selling steadily at last week's rate of 19%c. Both European and New York buyers are operating, particularly Russian agents.

Calfskins have a firmer tone, one packer selling 8000 March skins at 23c. A few southern skins were booked out at one cent less. Another packer sold two cars of Milwaukee skins and one car of St. Paul's at 24c.

Compared with the demand, stocks are fairly abundant, several thousand skins being reported in the hands of the big four packers. Chicago city calfskins are quoted at 22c, but selling prices showing nothing above 21c. February-March packer kip is listed at 20c down to 16c.

The following principal sales of packer hides during the week ended April 6 at Chicago were:

Large producers are sold out for three months ahead and it is understood that they are willing to let the custom smelters have the market until conditions return to normal.

Reports from abroad say that recent foreign buyers of the red metal in Europe have begun to sell it back to the United States.

The present spot price is 43 per cent above the figure at the beginning of the year and 68 per cent above the price a year ago.

LONDON (P)—Copper on the metal exchange became almost demoralized under general selling pressure today

LONDON (P)—Copper on the metal exchange became almost demoralized under general selling pressure today and declined £8 a ton, spot being quoted at £79 5s. compared with £87 yesterday. The chief factors prompting offerings were yesterday's Wall Street selling of copper shares, which was taken to indicate a coming decline in the metal, and the fact that second-hand electrolic also was being offered. The turnover today was about 4000 tons.

Better Business Letters

BY CHARLES EDGAR BUCK, Consulting Literary Counselor, Boston, Mass

10—Make the Final Words Count

On the closing words of a business letter rests the great responsibility of leaving the right impression with the reader; an impression that will make him remember the message; an impression that will lead him to act as the writer wishes him to act.

After we have shaken hands through an effective opening sentence, and after we have interested the reader in the contents of a letter, surely the closing words should bring to a focus all that has gone before; they should clinch; they should impel action; they should hit the mark! First, then, let's avoid closing sentences that are too general. Consider,

Will you please let us hear from you? Will you give this matter your attention? Your answer will be appreciated. We await your early reply.

These sentences are effective, sometimes, when it is immediately clear from them, and from the diction that precedes them, just what action is expected. I believe you will agree with me, though, in feeling that the following four combinations are even more clear, definite, and effective:

Which method of shipment do you prefer? Upon receipt of this letter, will you send us 85c? Will you please let us know whether this is correct? May we have your opinion before the 15th?

Secondly, always avoid closing with such old-time, weak expressions as: Thanking you . . . Awaiting your . . . We are . . . Hoping to hear . . . Trusting that . . . We remain . . . Assuring you that . . . And oblige . . .

Of course a letter should not end abruptly and there should be an element of courtesy in the closing urge, but the foregoing expressions have been so long employed and so much abused that they have lost their grip and are pitifully weak.

The impelling need for education of the mountain folk of the South has made so great an impress upon the Daughters of the American Revolution that 13 mountain schools are regularly aided by funds, according to Mrs. Henry M. Robert Jr. of Annapolis, Md. chairman of committee on patriotic education.

Outside aid is a necessity if these schools are to "carry on," since state schools are to "carry on," since state their mountain heritage never known before.

Transcending even these interests, these schools become community centers to which are brought all problems of the neighborhood. Here there people are taught how to make the rude little mountain heritage never known before.

their own dresses, and here they are given their first lessons in thrift and savings.
Socially there are music and glee clubs of their own talent, debating teams and even basketball, while in one school dramatics reached a state of enthusiasm that culminated in the presentation of "Pinafore." A program on the community radio has found the schoolhouse full and the overflow crowd standing outside in the rain, to less none of that message from the unknown world beyond that seemed to come to them almost miraculously.

There are insistent demands for more schools. When it became known in Alabama that the D. A. R. were to build a school in that State, requests came from so many communities that it was difficult to choose the location. And there are appeals for admission to existing schools especially difficult to refuse. One teacher had three drawers of her desk full of letters of application. At some schools boys have come driving their own oxen or ccw believing that thus equipped aid, based on the number of pupils in attendance, obviously is limited. The school buildings are small, of native timber sawed into lumber, and are scattered over the mountain sides. An effect of homogeneity is attained by application of a coat of paint of one color. Entrances to the buildings often are on two levels, the back portion of a floor cutting into the hillside while the front hangs over a fills me with gratitude. She always answered our questions. Nobody but a child understands what that means. Other persons of the household might tell us to do something and when we asked for further directions answer our questions by a "Go at once and do as I tell you. No more talk about it." But she never did. She always explained as fully as we needed and then let us go ahead and use our common sense to complete the job intelligently. Naturally children are curious about the strange things that go on in the wonderful world around them and we asked her about everything from lightning bugs to horseless carriages. We got a satisfactory answer each time. When people asked, as they sometimes did, how could she have the patience to answer our constant inquiries, she answered, "How would children learn if they never asked questions?"

of looking things up for ourselves. A large and reliable dictionary was almost our only reference book but it was a gold mine of information. It had pages of foreign words and phrases in the back, a glossary of Scottish terms, a list of abbreviations, a page properly proof-marked for the printer and other most interesting things. I can see that proofmarked page yet without even shut-ting my eyes and the illustrations "abacus" and "abracadabra" on the first page stand out as plain as day. I was habitually reading and often spelled out words for my mother to pronounce or give the meaning. We frequently looked them up together and I soon learned how it was done. Always when the meaning had been explained to me, mother gave several synonyms if she could. Then she had to explain that "syn-Transcending even these interests, onym" and "cinnamon" were entirely

PROSPERITY sans Unemployment

TNEMPLOYMENT and the Stabilization of Prosperity are economic problems, the solving of which President Hoover says will be major objectives of his administration. With his permission, plans to this end involving every state were presented to the recent Annual Conference of Governors in New Orleans.

An illuminating and readily understood explanation of this project will be published by THE CHRISTIAN Science Monitor in a series of 18 articles, to appear every other day from April 15, through May 25.

The New President and the New Economics

This series is especially written by Dr. William T. Foster, a former college president, now Director of the Pollak Foundation for Economic Research, Newton, Mass., and Waddill Catchings, a prominent New York banker, co-authors of the much discussed book, "The Road to Plenty."

Ground station employees must be licensed operators. Pilots require only a telegraph operator's certificate certifying knowledge of radio laws and how to operate a set.

An eight-foot dural antenna does away with any trailing wires. This is the only additional head resistance of equipment installed and, as it is stream-lined, resistance is slight.

Radiophone and the directional beacons make up the "Block System" of the air. They put the pilot in closer touch with the operation department than are engineers on trains. The only mechanical electric equipment added to Boeing planes for radiophone is a superimposed winding on the direct current generator, requiring two additional horsepower from the output of the motor.

its transcontinental radiophone service which enables planes and ground stations to talk with each other by phone, reveals the interesting fact that the pilot can hear the ground operator at 12,000 feet altitude better than at 100 feet because he misses ground absorption.

To enable the Boeing pilots on the transcontinental passenger, and also the mail and express planes, to talk to ground stations every minute of the 2000-mile flight, between the Golden Gate and the Great Lakes, 12 ground stations in seven states are required. Both the planes and the ground stations can send and receive approximately 200 miles.

Under this system it would be possible for travelers in Boeing passen-ger transports to talk to city numbers by calling a terminal station and asking to be connected with a house or any other number. But this will not be done immediately for the Department of Commerce permit stipulates that only messages dealing with operation of planes and "pro-tection of life and equipment" shall

A New American-Indian Policy

THERE is every indication that a profound alteration will take place in the Govern-ment's handling of Indian affairs in the present Administration. The office of head of the Indian Bureau is temporarily vacant, and Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, is looking about for a man qualified to fill the post. Unquestionably it is one of the most difficult administrative offices within the Federal Government. Looking back on the past, there has hardly been a time when some group or other was not dissatisfied with conditions, and-it is fair to say-hardly a time when conditions were not unsatisfactory. Added to the inherent difficulties of establishing a whole race as the wards of a state is the added handicap of a tradition of vacillating policy within the bureau. There have always been two contrasting theories before the Indian Commissioner in dealing with the great problem. Should the Indians be continued in their native customs and habits, and their reservation life be prolonged? Or should the Indians be "de-Indianized" and the major effort exerted to assimilate them to white civilization as rapidly as possible? The Canadian system of treating the Indians as allies, and leaving them in free possession of vast domains, is physically impossible in the United States, where the frontier has long since dis-

The eventual solution of the Indian problem, as Dr. Wilbur views it, is assimilation into the American population as a whole. This result may not come for years, or perhaps for centuries. It must be a slow and gradual process. In Dr. Wilbur's view, no one can maintain selfrespect who is avoidably dependent upon government support for existence. The Indian's dignity and self-respect will be enhanced when he has been put on a self-supporting basis. Indian life on a reservation means the continuance of a civilization of 300 years ago parallel with that of the present age of automobiles and airplanes. Dr. Wilbur is unable to see how such a contrast can endure over a long period of years, and he appropriately asks whether it is for the true interest of the Indians themselves that it should

Accordingly, in the coming years of the Hoover Administration, Dr. Wilbur intends to tackle one of the most difficult problems that can face any Secretary of the Interior. Very likely he will reverse the policies that reach to the background tory. Much will depend on the man who will take the actual job of directing the Indian Bureau. Dr. Wilbur intends to get one who will carry out his own proposals. Primarily, it is certain that the Indian administration, as Dr. Wilbur sees it, will not be a passive one in the next four years. Things will not be allowed to drag along. It is his plan to adopt the new rehabilitation program and put sufficient energy behind it to carry it

The Freedom of the Press

O SENSIBLE man would be hasty to tamper with the freedom of the press. In placing restrictions upon the free interchange of ideas, it is easy to make both ridiculous and tragic mistakes. Even the censorship of the stage, an institution readily lending itself to abuse, has frequently failed to work satisfactorily. But books, on account of their rapidity of production and higher standing as an intellectual force, provide a much more complicated problem. The length to which an unintelligent censorship can go is seen in Russia, where, according to Valeriu Marco, no fewer than 1896 topics were forbidden for discussion before the war. Nor has English judgment in such matters always proved trustworthy, for at one time both Shelley's "Queen Mab" and Southey's "Wat Tyler" were judicially decided unfit for publication. And there is the condemnation of Socrates to remind us that a restriction of freedom of expression will not always stop short of positive crime.

Nevertheless, it is well that, when the freedom of the press is discussed, as it is being discussed on all hands today, the exact meaning and significance of freedom should be understood. Most emphatically it does not consist in the absence of all restrictions, for restrictions are very often the indispensable condition of its existence. It is a fundamental rule of civilized government that the "liberties" of individuals must be limited in order that real liberty may flourish. The freedom of the world of commerce is founded on the restriction placed by the law upon the individual's freedom to repudiate contracts. From a similar process of reasoning it follows that the freedom of the press is not incompatible with restrictions on the printing of immoral and degrading matter. The possession of a right does not confer the further right of its abuse. The comments of the more responsible parts of the English press upon the recent activities of the Home Secretary suggest that this is a view generally acceptable to the country. Experience indicates that it is almost invariably undesirable that a censorship should be the means chosen to preserve the standard of literary decency, though some recent condemnations of this institution read rather curiously when one reflects that all the highest achievements of English literature were accomplished at a time when the censorship was still active. But Bernard Shaw was no doubt right in saying a few days ago that the existing law, if vigorously enforced, is sufficient to safeguard society from the indiscretions of that small number of writers and publishers who do not enough appreciate the responsibility of their calling. Sir William Joynson-Hicks, in enforcing the law, has the solid support of the best sections of public opinion, which realizes that the freedom of the press is to be judged strictly by its results, and that it is not so much important to be free to say what one likes, as to have something worth while to say.

Hollywood's Responsibility Abroad

MR. S. K. RATCLIFFE has been for a number of seasons now a family and down and across the United States, from out his mellow understanding and in his clear-cut phraseology illuminating for his audiences matters of international import. Never has this British publicist touched upon a topic which the most exacting of his hearers could consider beneath his notice, until recentily, when he has developed a sudden and surprising tendency to discuss the motion pictures. By contrast with the weighty deliberations of statesmen or the important pronouncements of the League of Nations Council, very possibly the motion pictures may appear trifling. But is that judgment altogether valid?

It is not Mr. Ratcliffe's way to mince matters, hence he has made the bold assertion that he believes American films are doing untold harm abroad. He has recalled the common man in England or on the Continent, who reads little and travels less, but who does frequent the motion pictures-preferably those which reach him from Hollywood because they divert and excite him most. To him America is a place so remote as to be positively fabulous, a country rich beyond the dreams of avarice, richer, he may feel, and more reckless, than it has any right to be. What makes him suppose such preposterous things? What else than his habit of gazing upon American films which depict luxurious and extravagant living, which depict license and lawlessness in many forms, crime and vice and general demoralization? In his philosophy, seeing is believing. And he is entirely within his rights. Not being able to judge for himself, it does not occur to him that he cannot trust the motion picture to tell the truth about America.

Hollywood does not produce two classes of films, one for home, the other for foreign delectation. Trustingly, indiscriminately, its products are sent forth to peoples from Kansas to Cape Town and from there to Timbuktu. Americans, with the panorama of American life unrolling under their very eyes, may be trusted not to regard too seriously the exaggerations of the motion pictures; but with people in other lands it is quite otherwise. America does not relish being misjudged and misrepresented abroad. Then let her make the most of what remedies lie within her own grasp. Hollywood aspires to entertain the world; but unwittingly she is also educating the world and, in large measure, it rests with Hollywood to make certain that education be sane and fair.

An Albanian Holy Synod

N INDEPENDENT Eastern Orthodox Church has appeared in Europe, namely, that of Albania. In this little mountainous country. about the size of the State of Maryland, stretching for 200 miles along the lower eastern shore of the Adriatic Sea, there live 850,000 Albanians, of which 100,000 are Roman Catholics, 500,000 Muhammadans and 250,000 Eastern Orthodox Christians. The Roman Catholics are in the extreme northern part, the Muhammadans in the center, and the Orthodox Christians in the south. That means that the Orthodox Albanians inhabit a territory contiguous to Greece, which is also inhabited by Orthodox Christians. Until now the Orthodox Albanians have been under the supervision and spiritual domination of the Patriarchate at Constantinople—that is to say, under the control and influence of the Greek Church and the Greek clergy.

This situation was, naturally, embarrassing to the Albanians, since the Greeks maintain with much insistency that the Orthodox Christians in Albania are Albanian-speaking Greeks. They claim a large part of southern Albania as Greek territory. And it is said that they use the Orthodox Church as an instrument through which to increase their influence and to substantiate their

In view of that fact, the Albanian leaders have long wanted to free the Albanian Church from Greek control and to establish an independent Holy Synod. However, the Greek ecclesiastical officials and the Patriarchate at Constantinople not only opposed this tendency, but refused to participate in the ceremony necessary for the formation of an independent Orthodox Holy Synod. In this difficulty the Albanian Orthodox Christians turned to the Serbian Church, and the Patriarch at Belgrade came to the rescue. instructing his representative in northern Albania to preside and give the required ecclesiastical sanction at the formation of the new Holy Synod. Thus in spite of all opposition the Albanians now have their own church.

The situation just brought about is the same as that which existed in Bulgaria sixty years ago, and in Rumania about the same time. For decades the Bulgarian Orthodox Church was under the control of the Greek Patriarchate, and most of the priests in Bulgaria were Greeks. In Rumania also vast areas of excellent farm land belonged to the Greek clergy. In Rumania, Prince Couza put an end to this situation about the time of the Civil War in the United States, and in 1885 the Rumanian Church became entirely independent. The Bulgarian Church gained its independence twenty years earlier after a long and bitter struggle. The Greeks have recognized the Rumanian Holy Synod, but still consider the Bulgarian Church as irregular and schismatic. Similarly, the newly established Albanian Church is considered illegal and irregular. This formation of an independent Albanian Church is part of Albania's process of national awakening. First an independent state was formed, then an independent kingdom, and now an independent church. Next, perhaps, will come the struggle to liberate the 600,000 "unredeemed" Albanians in Jugoslavia. For the moment, however, Albanian and Jugoslav relations have become very cordial, since Albania is grateful to Belgrade for making it possible for her to establish an Albanian Holy Synod.

The New South's Problem

TT WAS inevitable, in the light of recent events as recorded in the history of industrial progress in the East and North, that the South, and particularly what is regarded as the New South, would be brought face to face with an economic problem of major magnitude. The time has come, bringing with it to be faced and solved the question which employing capital in the textile industry, particularly in New England, has been facing for a generation. It is as to how to establish, as between employer and employee in that industry, a wage and working basis fair to all concerned.

Within recent years there has been a growing movement of textile manufacturers from north to south in the United States, due, as is generally conceded, to the comparatively higher wage scales paid in New England. Until quite recently those who have transferred their mills and looms to the South have been able to operate them more cheaply than in the North by recruiting operatives from the communities in which their mills are located. These recruits, unskilled and inexperienced in the main, have not been members of any organized labor union. Wages and working hours, as well as working conditions, have been regulated by the employers by contracts made with their employees individually.

But it appears that as some measure of skill has been attained by the recruited operatives, and as their service has become appreciably more valuable to mill owners, it has been found possible for the delegates and organizers of labor unions to convince them that it is to their advantage to bargain with their employers collectively. The objective, of course, is a higher wage scale. With this there usually goes a demand for shorter work days and improved conditions in the shops and factories. So it is quite natural that among employers in this particular industry, especially as they had hoped to be able to escape just such a situation by their strategic migration, there is determined opposition to the effort to "unionize" their personnel. No doubt they have visions of being compelled to face, eventually, the economic conditions imposed upon the industry in the North.

It is quite generally conceded that the only advantage heretofore enjoyed by textile manufacturers in the South has been that realized through the ability to man their plants upon their own terms. The claim is made by union their own terms. The claim is made by union organizers that the wage scale thus fixed is far too low. Obviously it has operated to the disadvantage of both employer and employee in the North. It has set up a competition from which northern mills have suffered.

No doubt a readjustment of wage and working conditions in the southern factories will result, sooner or later, from the efforts which have been begun. Whether or not the settlement will be one dictated by union representative remains to be seen. But it is not improbable that the result, however achieved, will be to make more cautious those who have regarded the new industrial field as one in which emancipation from economic problems was assured. In all human relations there is to be found, if it is sought, a fair and just basis acceptable to all concerned. But that meeting place cannot be geographically located; neither can its boundaries be limited by metes and bounds.

History as She Is Dug and Fished

NCE upon a time it was the custom to record history. Nowadays it is dug. In various Asiatic and European areas and in Central America, excavations are proceeding for the purpose of wresting from the earth the story of a bygone civilization. Surprising revelations already have been made, and it may be said, figuratively as well as literally, that "only the surface has been scratched." Great organizations and tremendous sums of money are involved in this work.

Not only is history dug, but it is also fished. Expeditions are setting forth from various quarters of the earth to search the bottoms of the seas for their records. Recently the attention of the world was called to the fact that two ancient Roman galleys, resting on the bottom of Lake Nemi in Italy for nineteen centuries. are to be uncovered. The method of procedure in this case is not to take the boats from the lake, but to remove the lake from the boats. This is being accomplished by means of powerful electric pumps, which already have brought the surface of the lake to a point where the stern of one of the galleys is above water.

Many attempts through the centuries have been made to recover these galleys, each of which is more than 200 feet in length. They were the property of a Roman emperor, and what they reveal is expected to add another bit to the history of the times when the Roman emperors were wont to flee from the trying heat of the forum to the cool breezes of the Alban Hills.

Editorial Notes

Color, color, and more color, seems to be the fashion of the day, and now we learn of ice cubes which are frozen in various colors by placing vegetable coloring matter in the cubecompartments of the refrigerator. Will the time come when the brawny iceman delivers his product in pink, mauve, or cerise, according to the desires of his customers?

That Chicago lawyer who well advises total abstinence as a weapon against the bootlegger evidently figures that where there is no demand there can be no business; and, in this case at least, no business is good business.

A conference of business men has decided that the best business letter is one that says what it has to say without fussiness. It would be difficult to improve on this, however:

Midway Island

WITH commercial aviation already well established, and aviation development progressing at such a rate that the average person cannot keep track of it, practicable transocean mail and passenger service cannot be far beyond the immediate horizon. And, with the development of larger planes of greater carrying capacity and wider cruising radius independent of contact with the earth, convenient and emergency "roosting places" for these mechanical birds of passage are as inevitable as railway terminals in conjunction with rail lines on land. When those developments take place, it is only reasonable to suppose that other branches of aviation science will have perfected a radio beacon for guiding aviators into port, fog-piercing lights, and other devices that will cause us to laugh at the present aviation base considerations of Midway Island. Midway would then receive but one consideration: it is a point of land contact for transpacific flying, set down almost in the middle of the world's greatest ocean. Midway Island would then become to transpacific aviation about what Europe will eventually be to eastbound aviation operating from America to India in two hops. The Island of Wake, approximately halfway between Hawaii and Guam, with Guam as an aviation stepping stone from our west coast to the Philippines and the Orient, and various other islands which Uncle Sam owns in the Pacific, will find new world importance in the airborne commerce and passenger traffic of the future. They will spring into prominence just as the Island of Vita Levu in the Fiji Islands leaped into prominence as an earth contact point, making possible the successful flight of the Southern Cross from America to Australia.

The present population of Midway Island is thirty-four persons. Twelve of them are employees of the cable stations, and are Americans or Englishmen. The others are Chinese, Japanese, or other racial mixtures recruited in the Hawaiian Islands for service on Midway Island as servants of the cable employees.

Without the several cable stations on these tiny, isolated islands, transpacific cable communication would be impossible. The lines of the Commercial Pacific Cable Company extend from the Pacific coast of the United States to Honolulu, from Honolulu to Midway Island, and thence to the Island of Guam. From Guam the cable goes to the Island of Yap to connect with the branch lines to Menado, on the Island of Celebes in the Dutch East Indies; to the Philippine Islands, Japan, and various points of the Orient. The resistance of sending electrical impulses through more than 8000 miles of copper wire laid over the ocean bottom is so great that it would be lost at the other end of the line but for the cable stations picking it up at way points and starting it on its way

The life of the little colony on Midway Island is one of isolation to tax the average human being almost beyond endurance. The, cable station employees contract for duty for a period of two years. That means two years in contact with the same little handful of people on two and one-half square miles of land, 1200 miles from the and one-half square miles of land, 1200 miles from the nearest land neighbor populated by humans—the Island of Kauai, westernmost of the major islands of the Hawaiian group. Mail and supplies are received once every three months, when the cableship Dickenson comes out from Honolulu. World news, of course, is picked off the cable every day, and the little colony is in constant communication with the entire earth.

The climate of Midway Island is essentially the same The climate of Midway Island is essentially the same as that of Honolulu—perpetual summer, except for the fact that Midway is slightly cooler by reason of being some hundreds of miles north of Honolulu. The island is a thoroughly healthful place, but recreation and amusements are of necessity limited and largely of local manufacture. Golf and tennis are popular games, and are played on links and courts which are destined some day to be a local factor of the strike field of ready investment. part of an aviation field of world importance. The salt I shipping.

water lagoon inside the coral reef is full of fish, and fishing there is both a sport and source of food supply. Fish form a welcome relief from the diet of canned goods. Fresh meat and ice are available only for brief periods following the quarter-annual visits of the supply ship. The cable employees choose the duty of distracting isolation on Midway Island primarily because they are well paid for it, and because a two-year tour of duty on Midway affords the opportunity to save practically all they

Cable employees for prospective assignment to Midway Island have to be carefully chosen. Certain physical requirements are demanded, but of far greater importance is a phlegmatic disposition capable of standing up under the influence of isolation and constant contact with the same little handful of fellow beings. Employees are selected with a view to meeting these requirements, but apparently no method of selection has yet been devised that is infallible. Numerous instances are recorded of men having been sent to Midway, and of frantic cable calls being received a few weeks later-to come with the cable ship and take them off the island.

Women are especially subject to complete transformation of disposition and temperament under the conditions of isolation on Midway. Mabel and Irene may have been the best of friends in Honolulu, but not so after three months of Midway. Indeed, some years ago this problem became one of such seriousness for the cable company that an order went forth: No more women permitted to remain on Midway Island longer than the visits of the cable ship. For several years this order remained in force. It resulted in discontentment among the men, who protested at being separated from their wives. Eventually, therefore, the order against women was rescinded. Cable employees now take their wives to. Midway Island, but those women are sent out with the understanding that they are to be removed from the island if they cannot live in peace and harmony with other members of their isolated little community.

Among the present inhabitants of Midway Island there are no names other than given names or nicknames-Bill, Frank, John, Pete, Domingo, Chang, Mabel, Mary, or Yoshi. Mr. or Mrs. drops right out of the language. Mr. Avondale becomes "Jack" or John; and Mrs. Richard de Longpre immediately becomes "Ruth" or "Nell.'

But, if Midway Island is to experience a sudden boom by reason of its future importance as a transpacific avia-tion base, such a boom will not be beyond the island's scope of previous experience. Some years ago (1906) the liner Mongolia en route from America to Japan and China blundered onto Midway Island. She went high and dry upon the island, but fortunately, upon a sandy beach. The population of the island, then twenty-seven, suddenly mounted to 657. The resident population of the island immediately began feasting upon celery, lettuce, turkey, and other delicacies salvaged from the ship, while the usual peace and quiet of the two and one-half square miles of Midway's surface were disturbed by a swelling chorus of Jacks, Toms, Henrys, and Bills; to say nothing of the Marys, Irenes, Helens, and others. Midway's population remained at that peak figure for some days, or until a ship could be sent from Honolulu to release the castaways. In due time the Mongolia was refloated, and with very little damage, after a major portion of her cargo had been jettisoned.

It was on Midway Island that Robert Louis Stevenson laid one of the scenes of "The Wreckers," thereby giving it greater world publicity than it ever received prior to the scheduled airplane landing there by Schlee and Brock. But, Midway Island is destined soon to be in the newspaper headlines again. It is only a matter of time before its beacon lights will rake the heavens, its radio impulses will hiss forth to guide aerial navigators to its diminutive shores, and it will be a busy airport of transpacific commerce. Nothing short of the abandonment of aviation can prevent Midway Island from becoming to transpacific air lines what the port of Honolulu now is to Pacific part of a deputy has enhanced his prestige. Edouard Deladier, Radical leader, was on his way to attend a meeting in Strasbourg. He received an urgent message telling him to get off at Saverne, some twenty miles from his intended destination. He was induced by two young men to enter an automobile, and with them he motored about the countryside for some five hours. They discoursed about Fascism, for such was their interest, and informed him that their intention was solely to prevent him from taking part in the assembly at Strasbourg. Finally, he was asked whether he preferred being put down where they happened to be in the country, or being motored to Strasbourg in the evening. He accepted the former course, walked some miles, caught a tramcar, and arrived for the meeting only a few minutes late. He thought it was a capital story and stold it as such. Asked by the police i the young men should be prosecuted, he replied, "Not at all. They were perfectly charming." And everyone laughed with him. Had he set out to punish his captors, everyone, instead, would have laughed at him.

A clever device has been patented by the composer Roger Visbecq, which will permit automatic translation to a roll of paper of the notes of music played on a piano. The writing down of such notes is a labor of which composers would often gladly be rid. They can now play their compositions freely and leave it to a copyist to unravel the roll and transcribe the music. A simple machine controlled by electricity and attached to a piano causes a hole to be punctured in the unrolling paper. placed behind the keys, at each pressure of a key. The paper rewinds on another roll, which can be easily taken away afterward. Perforated rolls have already been used for inserting in player-pianos and in various other ways for recording sounds, but this seems to be the first time the idea has been applied to the purpose in question. The form the roll takes as it emerges bears in appearance about the same relation to ordinary written music as stenographic copy does to longhand.

A French film has been produced which has elements of greatness. The tale itself is fragile. The sequence of scenes is at times clumsy. And yet, what a promise does the film not hold? What opportunities are not revealed? "Le Capitaine Fracasse," after the novel of Théophile Gautier, concerns a penniless scion of a noble family and a company of wandering players. He joins the troupe and accepts the rôle, quit by a member, of Captain Fracasse. Isabelle, the ingénue, captivates him, and they journey thus to Paris. A duke also takes a fancy to Isabelle, and thereafter follow abduction, duels, rescue, and a happy ending, with Captain Fracasse restored to high estate by favor of the King. The two things in the film which rouse admiration are the photography and the use made of ancient châteaus, old dwellings, and fragments of the pageantry of life in France of bygone days. Inexhaustible must be the legends which have been woven, or could be written, fitting for the film. The buildings exist, the settings are complete, the history is there, and all waiting for such photography as this and such mise

When a man had a "pièce de cent sous" in his pocket before the war, he felt quite at ease. There was ample for a modest meal, the journey home, and a nosegay for his wife. It represented a comfortable fortune for a moment, and was cast in good silver with the full, true value of five francs. The same coin is to reappear, that is, the same in most respects. It will be the same size, bear the same design, be stamped "5 francs" as before, and only the date and the quality of the metal will be

Paris | different. Nickel is to be used because five francs is OOD humor under provocative circumstances on the today only worth one franc of the pre-war money, so much has the franc depreciated in value since the war. This coin, probably as much as anything else, will sum up for the average Frenchman the changes in fortune wrought by the war. He will need five of these new fivefranc nickel pieces in his pocket before he will be able to spend his hundred sous as liberally as he did with the same-looking coin before the war.

> At a time when sermons are not permitted in the original language of the Catalans, not far across the border, in Provence, a sermon was given recently in the pure and beautiful "langue d'oc." In France there are no restrictions in the employment of the provincial tongues, but rather is the habit encouraged. Frédéric Mistral, poet, was one of the founders and has been the most illustrious of the representatives of the "Félibrige," or literary school instituted in Provence to maintain the different dialects of the "langue d'oc." A "félibre" is a poet or prose writer of this tongue. Joseph Roumanille was another Provencal writer who aided in restoring to its proper place the Félibrige during the latter half of the past century.

> A merry jingle of bells penetrated through the dull drone of the thudding traffic. It fell and rose in gentle cadences and drew the writer to the window. Would a Frenchman stop at the sound and leave his work? No. There would be nothing unusual to him in the sound. But to the writer, they were sleigh bells-the selfsame bells worn only by horses drawing sleighs when the tracks in the snow are worn and the pace is quick. No snow was there in Paris, for in fact spring was in the air. Spring or summer, fall or winter, they say, the same bells worn by the same horses are always heard. They are pulling fourwheeled delivery wagons, and simply in cheery way denoting their presence to pedestrians and motorists alike. This may be so, but to one at least the tintinnabulation will recall only one picture, even if he has to turn the other way to preserve the illusion.

"Why Not a Professor of Leisure?"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: "Why Not a Professor of Leisure?" the title of a subject that interested me immensely, recently appeared in your columns written by W. J. A.

Much of humanity seem in need of the knowledge that will enable them to occupy leisure hours with advantage. Here lies vital work for our present educationists.

The writer mentions notable individuals who are admirably fitted to occupy "Chairs of Leisure," if ever established. With regard and respect for these gentlemen may I point out that at least one brilliant scholar already fills that post, although in an unofficial capacity. I suggest the name of Prof. L. P. Jacks of Manchester College, For the understanding of the ability of this scholar to "Labor and Leisure," contained in "Responsibility and Culture," a book of Yale lectures for 1927, published at New Haven. Also an address to the "Conference on Industrial Welfare" in Balliol College, Oxford, September 1928, and contained in Hibbert's Journal for January. 1929, occupying twelve pages of interesting matter upon the "Ethics of Leisure"—"the use of leisure is the test of civilization."
